The observed whistler echoes have frequencies below local electron cyclotron frequency. The echoes are in the frequency range ~13-300 kHz and show time delays of a fraction of a second, and longer time delays at lower frequencies, typical of whistler mode propagation. Out of the ~300 cases examined, discrete echoes were detected in 24 cases.

(2003) were found to accompany both discrete and diffuse whistler mode echoes 90% of the time and were also present during 90% of the soundings when no whistler mode echoes were detected. It is proposed that the observed discrete whistler mode echoes are a consequence of RPI signal reflections at the
